Design Philosophy

My web design philosophy is driven by the needs of two customers: you and your target audience. My designs are customized to your needs, of course, but always with the target audience in mind. Therefore, I always begin every project with a comprehensive survey that asks important questions and focuses on getting the goals of the project in writing. This provides the roadmap to get where we are going.

I focus on building user-friendly interfaces that best communicate your message to your target audience. My goal is not only to communicate your message through words and images, but through the total "site experience." I emphasize clean designs with few distractions while delivering the most important information quickly and efficiently.
